Welcome Address

It is a great honour and pleasure to welcome you to the Management, Knowledge and Learning – MakeLearn international conference 2013. The conference is a great opportunity to make your contribution to and share the most recent developments in the field of knowledge management with experts from all over the world. The title of the MakeLearn international conference 2013 is Active Citizenship by Knowledge Management & Innovation.

International School for Social and Business Studies (ISSBS) is organising MakeLearn 2013 together with University of Zadar, Croatia and in cooperation with co-organisers, i.e., Kasetsart University, Thailand, Maria Curie-Skłodowska University, Poland, and Al Akhawayn University in Ifrane, Morocco. The conference deals with the management of knowledge and learning, particularly with issues brought forward by active citizenship. We believe that knowledge drives innovation in all spheres of the society, hence the focus of the conference on active citizenship by knowledge management & innovation.

In recent years, knowledge management has been given a lot of attention in businesses and other organisations as well as in rapidly increasing numbers of scientific and expert publications. The ISSBS encourages the discussion and exchange of knowledge also through the International Journal of Management, Knowledge and Learning, as well as through the Academic International Publisher ToKnowPress.

We are proud to present 160 papers from 36 countries and would especially like to welcome our keynote speakers: prof. dr. Frederick Kohun (University Professor of Computer & Information Systems, Robert Morris University, USA) and prof. dr. Branko Katalinić (University Professor at Vienna University of Technology, Austria). We would also like to thank everyone who helped us to organise MakeLearn 2013, and wish you all a successful conference and a pleasant stay in Zadar.

Conference Aims

Through International scientific conference MakeLearn 2013, the ISSBS encourages the sharing of most recent developments in the field of knowledge management between Slovene and foreign experts, as well as promotes itself and higher education in the Central and South-Eastern Europe. By including individuals from major regional businesses, MakeLearn also encourages discussion and the exchange of knowledge between the academia and the economy. In particular, this year's conference focuses on the issues of knowledge, management and innovation intertwined with active citizenship, which is reflected in the subtitle of the conference 'Active Citizenship by Knowledge Management & Innovation.'

Active citizenship means that members of organisations or nation-states have certain roles and responsibilities to the society and the environment. For example, they should try to help others, particularly by offering them high-level professional expertise in different areas such as management, business, education and technology. All people should be enabled to gain new and valuable experiences, meet new people, learn new skills, be innovative, and be better connected to local, national or global communities. This may strengthen social democracy, encourage people's sense of responsibility, solidarity and belongingness, enhance inclusion in a society and improve mutual knowledge and understanding of cultural diversity which are important foundations of modern societies.

The Knowledge Management of Culture, Crisis and the Economy

Dr. Frederick Kohun

University Professor of Computer & Information Systems,
Robert Morris University, USA

Thursday, 20 June 2013 • 9.30–10.10

Culture takes many forms including national, ethnic, professional, organizational, religious, etc. In the context of a political/economic system, it can be argued that dominant cultural identity can shift to the political/economic context. However, crises, such as an economic recession, can shift cultural context back to baseline identity. This talk discusses the context of and/or cultural consideration beyond language in both policy and political decision making. Second, and third order consequences of decisions can and do affect further economic and crisis decision making particularly with respect to higher education and healthcare.

Frederick G. Kohun, Ph.D., University Professor of Computer and Information Systems at Robert Morris University in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania has more than 37 years of experience as a professor and academic administrator (department head, associate dean, dean, and associate provost), and was the founding director of the doctoral program in Information Systems and Communication. He holds a bachelor degree in economics from Georgetown University, graduate degrees in economics and information science, from the University of Pittsburgh, and a Ph.D. in applied history in technology from Carnegie Mellon University. At Robert Morris University he led the design and implementation of eight technology based academic programs at the undergraduate and graduate level (including a doctoral program) as well as the attainment of ABET-CAC accreditation. He is known both nationally and internationally from his numerous publications and presentations in economics, health informatics, decision support, technological impact, and culture. Currently, he is active internationally as an accreditation evaluator and team leader having participated in more than 22 accreditation visits. In 2007 he was named the International Computer Educator of the Year by the International Association of Computer Information Systems. In 2012 he received the honor of an endowed doctoral scholarship fund named after him.

Education for Knowledge Based Society: Challenges, Chances and Risks

Dr. Branko Katalinić

University Professor at Vienna University of Technology, Austria

Friday, 21 June 2013 • 11.00–11.40

Our civilization is a technology and science based civilization. Both, technology and science are developing very quickly with the tendency to increase dynamic of changes. The organization of the society is continuous modifying and adjusting to the state which gives maximum benefits from the possibilities of present used technology and science. At moment our civilization makes transformation to the knowledge based society. Knowledge becomes key resource and power of further development of our civilization and society. Creativity is main strategy to generate continuous changes and improvements newly following the idea of sustainability. Education has the task to prepare new generations of high level educated people with abilities to run and improve this development. The worldwide educational system is very traditional, not up to date, and can fulfill neither in quality nor in quantity the requirements and needs of the time coming. This system loose more and more connection to the reality and must be evolutionary modified and adapt to the new situation and trends. In the lecture will be presented: the results of the analysis of present state, key problems, and proposed strategies and scenarios for future development.

Branko Katalinic, born 1952 in Starigrad Paklenica, Croatia, is professor in robotics, flexible and intelligent automation, at Vienna University of Technology and University of Zadar, and visiting professor at eighth universities in Europe and Asia. He made the studies in robotics and automation at the FSB – University of Zagreb and Royal Institute of technology in Stockholm. Present interests: Intelligent manufacturing systems, Self organizing production systems, Robotics, Mechatronics, Megatrends in Science and Technology, International scientific and academic cooperation, and Scientific Publishing. He is founder and president of DAAAM International network www.daaam.info for academic and scientific cooperation. He is founder and editor of three international journals. He designed and realized more flexible manufacturing systems, flexible assembly systems and industrial robots. Since last year he is Vice President of International Academy of Engineering and President of Central European Branch of IAE. He is honored with more than twenty international recognitions including five doctor honoris causa and more professor honoris causa. As coordinator or partner he is involved in many international and European projects. Since six years he is executive adviser and project director of one worldwide leading concern in automation, and responsible for the cooperation with universities, academy of science and all other institutions where knowledge generated, systemized and transferred to group or new generation.

The Forum is also an opportunity to reflect on the relevant business and academic responses to existing and future corporate and business challenges.

Speakers who will, in accordance with business practice and their own experience, present their views on the topic of the forum 'Maritime Highways: Development in Spirit of Active Citizenship,' are:

Dr. Pornthep Anussornnitisarn, Faculty of Engineering, Kasetsart University, Thailand

Dr. Toni Bielić, Head of Maritime Department, University of Zadar, Croatia

Dr. Jan Chadam, Gaz-System S.A., Poland

Dr. Petar Kragić, Member of the Board of Tankerska plovodba, d.d., Croatia

Academic Networking with Boat Trip to Kornati Islands

Friday, 21 June 2013 • 13.00–21.30

MakeLearn 2013 international conference includes the special opportunity for academic networking with boat trip to one of the Croatian national parks, the Kornati islands. According to the legend, Kornati, a maze of sea passages and islets, were created from a number of rocks God had left over after creating the world. He tossed them into the sea, looked at them, and decided nothing else needed to be corrected. The Kornati archipelago consists of 140 uninhabited islands, islets and reefs comprising an area of only 70 km². They are famous for the peculiar shapes of reefs and crags but particularly for their high cliffs.

Trip includes sailing next to the island Ugljan, through sea straits Mali Ždrelac and Mala Proversa towards Telašćica. Lunch will be served on the boat. After coming to the open sea, there will be an opportunity for the amazing view on Kornati archipelago. Sailing next to the island Tanjurić will offer the view of high cliffs. Trip then continues to the small fish town called Sali on the island Dugi, where there will be some time for relaxing. On the way back to Zadar we will pass the Lavdar canal while enjoying the sunset, traditional food and music from this region.

International Journal of Management, Knowledge and Learning

ISSN 2232-5107 (printed) • ISSN 2232-5697 (online) • www.ijmkl.si

International Journal Of Management, Knowledge and Learning (IJMKL) aims to bring together the researchers and practitioners in business, education and other sectors to provide advanced knowledge in the areas of management, knowing and learning in organisations, education, business, social science, entrepreneurship, and innovation in businesses and others. It encourages the exchange of the latest academic research and provides all those involved in research and practice with news, research findings, case examples and discussions. It brings new ideas and offers practical case studies to researchers, practitioners, consultants, and doctoral students worldwide.

IJMKL is indexed/listed in Cabell's Directories, Central and Eastern European Online Library, Directory of Open Access Journals, EconPapers, and Google Scholar.

IJMKL publishes original and review papers, technical reports, case studies, comparative studies and literature reviews using quantitative, qualitative or mixed methods approaches. Contributions may be by submission or invitation, and suggestions for special issues and publications are welcome. All manuscripts will be subjected to a double-blind review procedure.

Manuscripts should be double-spaced throughout and submitted via email attachment in MS Word format to Editor-in-Chief, Dr. Nada Trunk Širca at ijmkl@issbs.si with a brief bio sketch, 2–10 keywords and an abstract of approximately 50–100 words. For detailed instructions, please check the author guidelines at www.ijmkl.si. We do not process any submission that does not comply with IJMKL guidelines.

Industrial Management & Data Systems

ISSN 0263-5577 • <http://www.emeraldinsight.com/journals.htm?issn=0263-5577>

The Industrial Management & Data Systems, established in 1980, is published and distributed in nine printed issues a year by Emerald Group Publishing Ltd in UK. The Journal aims to improve top managerial skills by promoting awareness of new technology and related concepts and their implications.

- More than 2,000 institutions accessed IMDS online. The IMDS received an average of 917 downloads per day.
- Currently the IMDS has an acceptance rate of 10%. The IMDS also maintains a very rapid electronic submission, review and publication process. The turnaround time on average is 5–7 weeks from submission to a first decision.
- Based on the Thomas ISI JCR 2011 Report (released in June 2012), the ISI Impact Factor 2011 of IMDS is 1.472 and the ISI 5-year average Impact Factor of IMDS is 1.717.
- Currently the H-index (based on Harzing's Publish or Perish software) of the IMDS is 75. On average, cites per published paper = 29.17.

A title (including subtitle) of not more than 8 words should be provided. The title should not bear any abbreviations. A maximum word count of entire manuscript (including abstract, figures, tables and references) must not exceed 7,000 words, and all paper submissions must adhere to this. All authors and co-authors must be entered into manuscript center (not just in the manuscript Word file) with a valid email address of each co-author. Be advised that we do not process any paper that does not comply with all requirements. The IMDS does not process any paper submission with more than 4 authors, and the IMDS does not allow any authorship change once paper is submitted. References to other publications must be in Harvard style and carefully checked for completeness, accuracy and consistency. Paper submissions will receive an initial screening before they are entered into the double-blind review process. Important screening criteria include fit with the mission of the IMDS, significance and impact of the research, and likelihood of moving forward acceptance in two rounds of review. All suitable manuscripts will be subject to high standards of double-blind review at the IMDS.

International Conference 2014

The International Scientific Conference on Management of Knowledge and Learning (MakeLearn) is organised by the International School for Social and Business Studies (ISSBS) in cooperation with foreign partner universities, international institutes and organisations chosen in accordance with its annual theme. The conference takes place every June; its participation is international. The official language of the conference is English.

Through MakeLearn, the ISSBS encourages the sharing of most recent developments in the field of knowledge management between Slovene and foreign experts, as well as promotes itself and higher education in the Savinja region of Slovenia and Europe. By including individuals from major regional businesses, MakeLearn also encourages discussion and the exchange of knowledge between the academia and the economy. Although the general theme of the conference, i.e. management of knowledge and learning in businesses and other organisations, remains the same, each year the focus of the conference is adapted to regional and global findings, occurrences and needs of the time.
