

Phenomenology of Life: A Philosophical Approach for Sustainable Development

Carmen Cozma

PhD Professor

Department of Philosophy, Alexandru Ioan Cuza University of Iași, Romania

carmen.cozma@uaic.ro

Abstract

*A significant philosophy of nowadays is phenomenology of life established by Anna-Teresa Tymieniecka. Mainly developed throughout the treatises Logos and Life (1988-2000), and The Fullness of the Logos in the Key of Life (2009-2012), this significant contemporary phenomenological project introduces new concepts and a holistic-dynamic vision upon life and the creative human condition, promoting a very own direction of thinking, which offers coordinates as regards the responsible status of human being in the world for the well-being of humans and nonhumans alike. The author highlights the importance of educating and raising awareness among people especially in the horizon of moral and ecological beingness-in-becoming, taking into account the necessity to deal with a variety of complex risks, in a larger context of polarization and crisis. Her phenomenology stands for an exceptional path of better disclosing our inner potential, to cultivate it in a positive and constructive manner toward (self)fulfillment, in the inward-outward balance with the entire environment of life, on the ground of educating our morality. Our purpose is to emphasize a major philosophical contribution not merely in comprehending the critical situation in which we reveal ourselves, but also in deciphering a way to overcome it and to (re)find the equilibrium of everything-there-is-alive; finally, to disclose a robust path for sustainability.*

Keywords: phenomenology of life, environmental crisis, moral crisis, sustainability, wisdom in life